

How to Add a Unique Look to Your Outdoor Living Area

Creating a comfortable outdoor living space is the key to extending one's home outward into nature's airy brilliance. The possibilities are limited only by the size of the space you are decorating. Whether yours is a secluded backyard patio or a wrap-around front porch, any outdoor area can become your favorite place to relax.

Once you decide on your outdoor furniture, the details you can infuse into the space make it your own. Think about your favorite artistic pieces inside your home. Does your style resemble a country scene painted on reclaimed barn wood, or are you more drawn to a delicate metal fleur-de-lis sculpture for your patio wall? When choosing outdoor wall décor, consider whether it will be exposed to or affected by the weather.

The use of different textiles and pops of color on your patio or deck can add much to its décor. You can find fun uses for macramé wall art, plant hangers, seashells, and baskets. Pillows, cozy throws, and area rugs are functional and will adorn your seating areas by adding texture and color. Think about extending your indoor decorating schemes to the outdoors.

Constructing a potting shed, which is also referred to as a she shed, in your outdoor space is another idea that can add functionality and character if you enjoy gardening. It is a wonderful place to keep your yard tools and provides a convenient place to take care of your plants. Insert your eclectic style into your shed, making it a focal point in your outdoor space.

When thinking about the vegetation for your outdoor space, potted plants are always fun to include. There are both shade and sun-loving plants, and there is a large variety of wonderful plants that repel pesky insects. Incorporating plants like this is a great idea to add to the comfort of your outdoor living.

While choosing plants, you will also want to consider the vessels they will flourish in. Most plants need well-drained soil; a pot with drainage holes in the bottom is usually the best way to avoid overwatering your plants. Think of using inexpensive terracotta pots, but then take them to the next level by placing them in baskets, vintage cookware, or elegant concrete patio urns.

If space permits, yard art has become a wonderful way to add charm to your outdoor area. Think about birdbaths, waterfalls, statuary, wagon wheels, container gardens, and more; an artistic garden bench or antique garden tool may pique your interest. Your personal taste is what matters the most, so choose items that bring you joy.

Another area of your outdoor space is the ground or hardscape that everything sets on top of. You might have a cement patio, but if you are starting from the ground up, get creative with design options in pavers, bricks, tiles, or wood.

Whatever choices you make for your outdoor living space, know that your individuality will show through. Relax and have fun as you approach your project. Your reward will be an inviting and comfortable outdoor environment where friends and family enjoy each other's company.